UNREFT

CLERGYMAN'S NIGHTMARE

the clerk would have had no access to the books in another club than the desk. It was a long time standing there." These were pushed in after the clergyman had entered, by the bands, who then retired. Of course, the stranger, when he opened the door, stepped out into vacancy. We have seen a preacher panned into the pit, and unable to get the door unfastened till long after midnight. The door was luckily misused by a churchwarden. Some little incidents, trivial as they may be, are very conducive to clerical nightmare, which, as we have observed, is usually made up of very small events. Another common terror is that of being late for service. Some clergymen sleep so soundly that they go into the vestry half an hour before the time. A country parson was suddenly attacked with diphtheria, late in the week. Recourse was had in vain to the neighbours, and it was decided at last to telegraph to London for a "guinea-pig." But "service" was over, and no clergyman. Many of the congregation had been called away, and waited all the morning. About one o'clock the stranger preacher, walked in, but of course, much too late. He had got out, he explained, at a station ten miles off by mistake, and had made his way on foot. He was never suspected there, there had been no one to tell him that he had done so, it might have gone hard with him; but the pious fraud was so well kept up that he even received the description of a sermon which was never preached. In after years his nightmares were compounded of "guinea pigs," diphtheria, and lateness—a horrible combination. There was a clergyman in "Macbeth." The clergyman who is so nervous may be expected to enjoy the discharge of his duties. It is nothing to him that he has forgotten to bring the banns, took from the rectory. He gives out the names in a tone which tells each the names have been carefully called. He always selects the appropriate text for his sermon. He never designates the "little girl at the font" "he," because he never forgets to ask beforehand if it is a boy. He is imperturbable, and can keep his countenance even when the curate reads "mistakes for mistakes." But even he may have his nightmare. One of the coolest of persons had an old lady among his flock who had reached the epoch of life denominated "second childhood." Her mental aberration took the form of doting on the clergyman; and his special nightmare was that she had been in her parsonage before the congregation. How could that suffer, after a green-room supper, to be gathered from these considerations is this:—No one should drink freely of an iced drink when his body is already tired and fatigued, and when he should always abstain from drinks entirely, under any circumstances; while those disposed to cardiac failure or internal congestions should eschew such beverages altogether. It cannot be denied that iced beverages, even when taken in small quantities at a time, and taken, as ordinarily served, when consumed during or after meals, are liable to impair or arrest the digestive process. For the process of digestion in the stomach, the contents of that viscous mass must be maintained at a temperature of about 100deg. Fahr.; anything below that temperature which enters the organ not only impedes digestion, pro tanto, by proportionately reducing the heat of the gastric contents, but also causes the cells lining the stomach to raise the temperature of the elements of its own temperature to the point at which digestion normally proceeds. Another and a distinct risk to health in the dietetic use of ice, arises from the frequent employment of impure ice for the preparation of iced and iced drinks. This is a very inadequately appreciated. It is still a popular fiction that impurities in some way separate from water as it freezes into ice, and that water-ice, as ice, must of necessity be pure, whatever the impurities of its source. Of course, this is not so. Ice not only includes all the suspended or dissolved impurities in the water from which it is derived, but it also certainly perpetuates the vitality and activity of certain organisms which it may contain, by preserving them from decomposition. In hard winters, a great deal of impure ice is collected in this country from many questionable sources, and is sold and used for domestic purposes. None but the most reputable purveyors of ice should be allowed to collect and store large quantities of dangerously impure ice are distributed to the public by itinerant vendors of cheap ices, who, in warm weather, seem to drive a thriving trade in our streets.

ICES AND ICED DRINKS.

HOW THE BAD BOY CURED PA.
 "Come in," said the grocery man to the bad boy, as the youth stood on the steps in an uncertain sort of awe, as though he did not know whether he would be welcome or not. "I tell you, boy, I pity you. I understand your pa has got to drinking and he is making a bad thing of it. He is drinking the bumblers a boy, and makes him so ashamed, as to have a father that is, in the habit of toasting in too much benzine. A boy feels as though everybody was down on him, and I don't wonder that such boys often turn out bad. What started your pa to drinking again? Oh, ha, ha, think he was drunk when he married Ma. But I guess he has got him all right now. Ha is the scariest man you ever saw. Ma's has an idea that I have got some sense yet, so I told her that if she would do just as I said, me and my chum would scare pa, so he would wear off. She said she would, and we went to work. I got a shirt about half big and small for pa, and Saturday night, and had the glasses taken out and a pair put in their place that would magnify, and I took them home and put them in pa's spectacle case. Then I got a suit of clothes from my chum's pa's trunk, and I got a pair of shoes from my chum's uncle's. My chum's uncle is a very small man, and Ma is corpulent. I got a plug hat three sizes smaller than pa's hat, and took the same put of pa's hat and put it in the small hat. I got a shirt about half big and small for pa, and put its initials on the thing under the button, and got a pair of pants with buttons like a pair of pants. Pa had promised to brace up and go to church on Sunday morning, and ma put these small clothes where pa could put them on. Well, ma told pa he looked awfully bloated, and that his dissipation was killing him, as well as all the rest of the family. Pa said he guessed he'd better go to church, and he took the glasses and put on his spectacles and looked at himself in the glass. You'd a dide to see him look at himself. His face looked as big as two faces, through the glasses, and his nose was a sight. Pa looked scared, and then he held up his hand and looked at that. His hand looked as big as two hands, and his nose was a sight. With some chalk on my face, and I began to cry, and said: 'O pa, what ails you? You are so swelled up I hardly know you.' Pa looked sick to his stomach, and then he tried to get on the pants. Oh my! it was all I could do to keep from laughing to see him! He got on his pants, his legs in, and when I got a shoe horn and gave it to him he was mad. He said it was a mean boy would give his pa a shoe-horn to put on

PRINCESS LOUISE AS AN ANGLER.

The Princess Lorne and Lord Lorne have obtained splendid salmon fishing; during their visit to New Brunswick, and on the Canapapa River they captured an immense number of fish. The Princess landed six large salmon to her own rod in one afternoon, one of which weighed 30 lbs. and the others killed fish up to 45 lb. The Princess despatched three of her finest fish to the Queen at Osborne, securely packed in ice, and some of Lord Lorne's found their way to the Duke of Argyll's villa at Kensington. The rivers in New Brunswick are swarming with salmon this season, and the sport of fishing has been unusually exceptionally good. The Princess will be able to fish the Queen's returns in the Des, below Ealmoral, when she returns, and she will be the first lady who has waded a line in that water. The Duke of Argyll can give his daughter-in-law some good salmon fishing in the close, by the river which flows into Lochfyne, close to Strathgry Castle.—World.

A HORRIBLE PUNISHMENT.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press describes a horrible Hindoo mode of punishment. The bamboo plant grows with wonderful rapidity in a tropical climate. That fact did not escape the notice of the Hindoo tyrants. Slaves and captives were tied up by the neck with the sharp end upward, they would order the victim to be led to it. Looking around, he would see no instrument of death near by, and feel relieved, perhaps, that his life was to be spared. His torturers would congratulate him and ask him to be seated on the end. The victim obeyed, and then the sharp end of the body immediately cut the concealed bamboo shoot and then he lay down by stakes so that he could not move. As night wore on the victim would realize his fate. He would find that slowly, but, with terrible certainty, the bamboo was growing up into his body. He was generally left to his fate. Growing at the rate of three inches a night, the imprisoned victim would finally put an end to his suffering by penetrating a vital part. But before that took place what passed an eternity of agony. The patient must have known that the suffering of such a watch must have been, with that bamboo shoot slowly and inexorably growing through his living body. Fortunately, before the end came, complete insensibility generally obscured the consciousness of the sufferer.

HOWLING DOGS.

Many worried and wakeful persons find in the howling of dogs at night a persistent, widespread, and most annoying form of irritation. The owners of dogs given to spend the hours of darkness in assiduous howling, appear generally to regard with a serene personal importunability the noisy nuisance which makes night hideous to their neighbours. Nevertheless, the howling of dogs is a very small annoyance to those who are so in populous places, ought to feel bound to take the simple precautions which alone are necessary to prevent a troublesome form of vexation, which is really a serious source of inconvenience and loss of rest, and possibly of loss of health, to very many persons who are not so fortunate. The incessant giving warning tongue upon certain occasions no one would object, but the purposeless and unending howling of the chained curs which are especially prevalent in the suburbs of towns is simply intolerable. It is not necessary to extirpate dogs to put an end to the annoyance of howling. The annoyance is perfectly preventable by the adoption of a few simple and sensible measures which, so far from injuring the offending animals, tend to give them length of days by confining to their contentment. Those who have had experience in keeping dogs kennelled at night, may be able to suggest the best way of doing it. If dogs, instead of being cruelly chained up out of doors, in kennels which are often draughty and damp, be allowed to have their liberty by day, and to lie within the house at night, they will generally sleep through the night in perfect quietness, or, if it be necessary, they will howl but a few days. It is not to be left loose at night, when it will be found that he will retire quietly to his kennel, and abstain from howling, especially if he be furnished with some fresh hay on a clean mat for a bed. In warm weather, dogs often howl simply because they want water, and dogs howl in winter because they are kept too close. A chain, both by night and by day. This is a common and most reprehensible form of cruelty, dogs so treated are sure to be restless and irritable and can scarcely be healthy. —British Medical Journal.
